I believe the gov't should continue to run the medical sector the way it has for the last many many years, now it is quite affordable, people on welfare don't need to pay, or pay little and wealthy people can go the private hospital route if they wish.

The way the medical reform works is like playing the money game, as someone will have to pay eventually, no insurance company will be in it to loose money, so poor people still won't be able to pay, middle class will be squeeze, the rich don't really care. So instead of setting up this and that and wasting money, just put that money into our current medical system.

Some change may be needed, so hire more front-line staff and trim the extra fat at the top. With too many generals and not enough soldiers, war will be lost, sometime before it even start!

If the gov't don't think the currency fixed to the US $ has fault, and since it has been running for a long time and need not be fixed, then why change the medical system?

Like many things, maybe the gov't is trying to do well, but usually miss the boat, ie. retail sales tax, mpf, the central by-pass*, clean air / blue sky action#, now medical reform, but running it incur many cost that maybe the only one benefit are the gov't official posts created to run it and businesses that are setup to meet gov't policy.

*I truely believe the traffic problem in central / wan chai can be a lot better if the gov't owns all three harbor tunnel crossing and charge a fixed price, say $40, on traffic GOING to the HK island.

#If you want more clean air, build more well designed bike path, like ones in NY, SF, London or major world city. If it is there, people will use it. If third world cities and world class cities can do it, what happened to HK?

So NO to medical reform and waste of tax-payer's money.
