

cheung raymond

12/06/2008 23:04

To beStrong@fhb.gov.hk

cc

bcc

Subject 醫療改革諮詢

Please respond to

☐ Urgent

☐ Return receipt

☐ Sign

☐ Encrypt

Dear Sirs,

I am age 47, male, annual income is over 200,000.

Basically, I can contribute certain percentage of income to join any medical plan whatever volunteer or mandatory; but my opinion is why government force people to contribute from their salary.

I already have medical/hospital insurance covered by my employer, but I have never stay overnight in private hospital because no private hospital nearby, on the other hand, if I go to private hospital, I need to pay all expense to hospital and then claim back to insurance company afterward, the problem is I have no idea how much amount I can claim back.

when I get sick, I never show off my medical card because the medicine is different.

With above experience, should I trust Mandatory insurance plan can benefit me? I will say NO!

Besides, why should I contribute insurance plan but got same medical service with other non-contribute person?

My conclusion is remain everything unchange but encourage the people to contribute insurance volunteer by offer taxation allowance.

B. Rgds
Raymond Cheung